Key Drivers of Performance

- » For both the quarter and the year, the fund generated an attractive return and captured most of the global equity market's upside, while adhering to our risk-managed investment approach. The fund benefited from favorable security selection as our investments in higher-quality, growth-oriented businesses performed well on a global basis.
- » Security selection in industrials (construction machinery & heavy trucks and industrial machinery) lifted return, as did selection in consumer staples (personal products and soft drinks).
- » Security selection within health care (biotech and pharmaceuticals) weighed down performance, as did selection within materials (gold mining and specialty chemicals).
- » The portfolio's investments in Europe added significant value, whereas our U.S. selection and underweight trailed the benchmark.

Market Overview

- » Each of the major U.S. equity indices reached new highs in the period, with the S&P 500 Index marking an impressive ninth-straight quarter of gains.
- » In Europe, shares were somewhat mixed, but the region reflected generally positive economic data, solid earnings growth, and accommodative monetary policy upside.
- » Japan's recent PMI data revealed continued strength in the manufacturing and services sectors, while more sluggish retail sales pointed to lackluster consumer demand and wage growth.
- » Emerging market equities produced leading returns for the full year and benefited from strong earnings growth, appreciating currencies, upbeat investor sentiment and capital inflows.
- » Global convertibles participated in the upside of equities, as the ICE BofAML Global 300 Convertible Index returned 2.46% in the quarter and 16.06% for 2017.

Positioning and Portfolio Changes

We positioned the portfolio with the goal of providing upside equity participation along with downside resilience during periods of spiking market volatility. We favor company structures that offer compelling risk/reward characteristics relative to their underlying common stocks. The portfolio holdings reflect a combination of core growth and more cyclical opportunities in key sectors, including information technology, consumer discretionary, financials, industrials and health care, in terms of large absolute weights. From a sector standpoint, we maintained relatively stable weights during the quarter. We slightly increased the portfolio weight to energy, financials and real estate, while trimming the weight to consumer discretionary and health care because of security-specific rationale.

Outlook

The balance of corporate and macroeconomic data points to continued synchronized global growth across regions. Global monetary policy remains accommodative overall, though multiple central banks are edging toward policy tightening, and we are seeing a pivot toward fiscal stimulus. In terms of broad portfolio positioning, we continue to identify opportunities in global equities, reflective of positive fundamentals, moderate inflation and relatively attractive valuations, and we favor a blend of investments in secular and cyclical growth companies. As noted, relative valuations and limited growth prospects frame relative underweights to defensive areas overall. We see significant opportunities in companies with earnings growth catalysts, solid cash flow generation and improving-to-strong balance sheets. From the thematic and sector perspectives, the portfolio and strategy remain focused on opportunities in the information technology sector, consumer companies with targeted areas of demand, and cyclical financials and industrials offering improving fundamentals and catalysts.
