Key Drivers of Performance

- » The information technology sector was the market leader in the third quarter. Portfolio holdings in semiconductor equipment were especially strong, and the selective use of convertible securities was additive as well.
- » The portfolio's underweight to the lagging consumer staples sector was additive to relative performance, and the portfolio's holdings also outperformed those of the benchmark.
- » Portfolio health care holdings lagged those of the benchmark, as pharmaceuticals and health care equipment names detracted from relative performance.
- » Although our selection was positive, our overweight to the lagging consumer discretionary sector held back return.

Market and Portfolio Overview

- » The market's rally was broad based as each of the major U.S. equity indices reached new highs at quarter-end. The S&P 500 Index, gaining 4.48%, marked its eighth straight quarter of gains.
- » Market participants were heartened by strong corporate earnings, continued health in manufacturing and services data as well as moderate gains in employment and wages, which held inflation quite low.
- » Market leadership rotated somewhat from the second to the third quarter. Small caps outperformed large caps with the Russell 2000 Index (+5.67%) besting the S&P 500 Index. Value stocks rallied in September, as reflationary sectors improved—the Russell 1000 Value Index (+2.96%) was up more than double the Russell 1000 Growth Index (+1.30%) for the month, yet value lagged for the quarter.
- » Convertibles posted a 3.77% return in the quarter as reflected by the BofA Merrill Lynch All U.S. Convertible Index (VXA0). Convertibles participated in the upside move of the broader equity market and outpaced the high yield market.

FUND HOLDINGS – CONTRIBUTORS

FIRM NAME	% OF FUND	FIRM PROFILE	ANALYSIS
Altria Group, Inc.	00%* Bought During Period	Altria Group is a holding company and the parent of Phillip Morris USA, John Middleton, US Smokeless Tobacco Company and Chateau Ste. Michelle wines. The business en masse is one of the world's largest marketers and producers of tobacco, cigarettes and other related products. Altria also owns a large share of SABMiller, a leading beverage and brewing company.	The portfolio added Atria shares late in the quarter, after the stock decreased. Altria shares struggled in July because of a disappointing earnings release, pressures from an increased tax on cigarettes in California, and renewed concerns about smoke exposure. Given the stock's beaten-down price combined with the opportunity to promote smokeless tobacco products, we believe the stock was attractively valued and offered good growth dynamics. The stock began to recover toward the end of the quarter.
Lam Research Corp.	0.7%*	Lam Research is a U.S.-based supplier of wafer fabrication equipment and services. Lam designs, manufactures, markets and services semiconductor equipment used in a wide variety of products.	During the quarter, Lam reported revenues and earnings ahead of market consensus. Lam has benefitted and should continue to experience a tailwind from growth as a data storage supplier. We believe the company to be attractively valued, especially relative to its growth potential.

FUND HOLDINGS – DETRACTORS

FIRM NAME	% OF FUND	FIRM PROFILE	ANALYSIS
Priceline Group, Inc.	0.2%*	Priceline Group is an online travel company that provides worldwide travel and reservation services for car rentals, flights, hotels and cruises.	The portfolio held a convertible security during the quarter, which had a slightly positive total return for the period, while the stock was down just over 2%. During the quarter, the stock sold off as forward-looking measures grew less than market expectations. The stock recovered slightly during September, and we believe the company and business is well managed and offers strong growth.
Allergan, PLC	0.7%*	Allergan is multi-national pharmaceutical company that operates in specialty pharmaceuticals and medical devices. In addition to producing branded and generic drugs, Allergan performs research and development.	The portfolio held an investment in Allergan through a convertible security, which lost value but outperformed the common stock as the company came under scrutiny for transferring a patent to the Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe, which is immune from challenges under a patent review system. Allergan has a strong product pipeline and has announced a significant stock buyback program, bolstering our belief in the company and the investment.

Calamos Growth and Income Fund Third Quarter 2017 Report

Positioning

The portfolio's largest sector weights remain in the information technology and consumer discretionary sectors. Consumer discretionary includes a diverse set of industries and represents the portfolio's largest overweight to the S&P 500 Index, though that relative overweight was reduced slightly during the quarter. Information technology still offers some of the best growth opportunities in the market and has been a strong market leader for many months. Portfolio holdings include a mix of convertible securities where valuations and risk/reward can be well managed. The portfolio is underweight health care because of concerns about potential changes to national health care and drug pricing, though the underweight was reduced slightly during the quarter. The portfolio is also underweight materials and financials, which reflects a cautious view on the reflation trade and how quickly the market has climbed relative to fundamental economic improvements. We will monitor the changes in fundamentals and the potential for policy that could bolster economic growth forecasts in order to increase sensitivity to the reflation trade. The portfolio's tilt to stable-yet-high growth and the use of convertible securities to manage risks should place the portfolio in good standing during a continuously volatile political environment.

Outlook

The jury is still out on how brisk a clip of growth the U.S. can sustain, but a recession does not appear imminent. Optimism about tax reform has revitalized the reflation narrative, and we believe the passage of new tax policies could catalyze corporate spending and earnings, as well as another leg of the equity market rally. A stable to weaker dollar and accommodative central bank policies around the world can help sustain global economic expansion, providing additional support to the U.S. economy. When the Fed does move forward with its balance sheet reduction, it will be entering uncharted waters. Even so, we expect a gradual course shaped not only by U.S. economic data but also global conditions.

As we look to upcoming quarters, we see additional upside in stocks. However, risk management and active management are increasingly important in an environment where market participants have been quick to punish any company that disappoints. We also continue to view convertibles favorably given their historical performance in rising rate environments and their ability to dampen volatility versus a pure equity exposure.
