

U.S. Convertible Market Snapshot

DATA AS OF 9/30/20 | www.calamos.com

OVERVIEW

Joseph Wysocki, CFA, Senior Vice President, Co-Portfolio Manager

Risk assets paused in September as markets digested several factors including a resurgence in COVID-related cases, the upcoming elections and an increasing divergence between winners and losers in the broader equity markets. Despite the slight pullback, the convertible market posted the second consecutive quarter of double-digit returns and continues to be one of the strongest asset classes on a YTD basis.

New issuance remains solid with $11 billion in global deals pricing during the month, now exceeding $125 billion for the year. The U.S. leads with $88 billion so far and could surpass $100 billion for only the second time in history. Looking forward, we continue to see a healthy mix of new and existing convertibles that provide an attractive opportunity set to help navigate short term volatility and position portfolios to seek further potential upside in equities while also managing downside risk.

Active management does not guarantee investment returns and does not eliminate the risk of loss. A convertible bond is a fixed income alternative with “fixed income characteristics” when it is valued at about the same level as a similar non-convertible bond and is not as sensitive to the underlying equity. A convertible bond is a total return alternative with “hybrid characteristics” when it has fixed income characteristics as previously explained but is becoming increasingly sensitive to changes in the underlying equity price. An equity alternative with “equity characteristics” represents a convertible bond that is highly sensitive to movements in the underlying equity. Percentages shown represent the proportion of convertible bonds in the ICE BofA All U.S. Convertibles Index (VXA0) that fall into each classification.
