WEEKLY HEADLINES

How Much Cash Remains on the Sidelines?

How much cash remains on the sidelines with the potential to power the stock market further? Below are some opposing views.

"This is a well-loved bull market that has entered the 'belief phase,'" according to this CNBC post, expecting equity inflows/demand in 2021 to be driven by:

- Systematic flows, hedge fund positioning, retail buying, share buybacks, and rotation from non-equity assets
- Big bank stock repurchases
- Deployment of SPAC funds
- Reactivated systematic asset-allocation strategies
- Index funds as late-coming buyers

Taking the other side is this AdvisorAnalyst.com post, arguing that a look at the stock-to-cash ratios suggests there is very little available buying power for investors.

Cash in money market funds—used by retail, corporate and foreign investors—may be earmarked for non-investment purposes. Mutual funds are holding record low levels of cash. Corporations may be hoarding their cash (a result of record debt issuance) to ensure their survival in a weaker 2021.
