Opportunistic Investing with a Focus on Income

We believe dividend-paying companies can not only help provide income in a portfolio, but may do so while also delivering the potential for both lower volatility and better risk-adjusted performance than companies that don't pay dividends.

HISTORICALLY, DIVIDEND STOCKS HAVE HAD LOWER VOLATILITY AND HIGHER RETURNS

Over the 5- and 10-year period, the S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index – consisting of S&P 500 firms that have increased dividends every year over the past 25 years – has had lower volatility and higher Sharpe ratios than the overall S&P 500 Index.

Past performance is no guarantee of future results. The Calamos Dividend Growth Fund has an effective date of 8/5/13. There are significant differences between the S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index, the S&P 500 Index and the fund itself. The S&P 500 Index includes newer and more growth-oriented companies than the S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index and as a result may be subject to greater volatility. The S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index includes established dividend-paying companies, which may lead the index to have diminished potential for capital gains relative to the S&P 500. The indexes shown are not intended as proxies for the fund's actual performance and may differ significantly from performance of the fund.

Annualized standard deviation is a measure of volatility. Sharpe ratio is a calculation that reflects the reward per each unit of risk in a portfolio. The higher the ratio, the better the portfolio's risk-adjusted return. The S&P 500 Index is generally representative of the U.S. equity market. The S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index includes S&P 500 Index companies that have increased dividends every year for the last 25 years. Unmanaged index returns assume reinvestment of any and all distributions and, unlike fund returns, do not reflect fees, expenses or sales charges. Investors cannot invest directly in an index.

PEG ratio is a stock's price/earnings ratio divided by estimated earnings growth rate in the next year; a lower PEG indicates that less is being paid for each unit of earnings growth. Russell 1000 Index measures the performance of the large-cap segment of the U.S. equity universe. It is a subset of the Russell 3000 Index and includes approximately 1,000 of the largest securities based on a combination of their market cap and current index membership. Current (SEC) Yield reflects the dividends and interest earned by the Fund during the 30-day period ended as of the date stated above after deducting the Fund's expenses for that same period. Important Risk Information. An investment in the Fund(s) is subject to risks, and you could lose money on your investment in the Fund(s). There can be no assurance that the Fund(s) will achieve its investment objective. Your investment in the Fund(s) is not a deposit in a bank and is not insured or guaranteed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) or any other government agency. The risks associated with an investment in the Fund(s) can increase during times of significant market volatility. The Fund(s) also has specific principal risks, which are described below. More detailed information regarding these risks can be found in the Fund's prospectus.

The principal risks of investing in the Calamos Dividend Growth Fund include the risk of: declining equity values; losses from MLPs related to lack of portfolio diversification, changes in tax laws, lack of liquidity, declining equity values, and conflicts over control rights; incorrect selection or judgments on portfolio holdings by the investment advisor; increased transaction costs because of frequent turnover; losses from currency fluctuations; lack of liquidity or correlation to underlying securities in the options market; and potential illiquidity of securities purchased privately under Rule 144A. The options risk is the Fund's ability to close out its position as a purchaser or seller of an over-the-counter or exchange-listed put or call option is dependent, in part, upon the liquidity of the option market. There are significant differences between the securities and options markets that could result in an imperfect correlation among these markets, causing a given transaction not to achieve its objectives. The Fund's ability to utilize options successfully will depend on the ability of the Fund's investment advisor to predict pertinent market movements, which cannot be assured. More detailed information regarding these risks can be found in the Fund's prospectus.

As a result of political or economic instability in foreign countries, there can be special risks associated with investing in foreign securities, including fluctuations in currency exchange rates, increased price volatility and difficulty obtaining information. In addition, emerging markets may present additional risk due to potential for greater economic and political instability in less developed countries.
